Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 17 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mostly dry evening. Cloud thickening overnight, with isolated showers possible.

This Evening and Tonight:
Mostly dry but breezy through the evening, with some clear spells, mainly towards the coast. Thicker cloud across the Pennines spreading east overnight, along with a few outbreaks of rain. Patchy frost remaining possible in sheltered rural valleys. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Monday:
Breezy, and often rather cloudy, but also some sunny spells. A few outbreaks of rain remain possible through the day, but most parts dry. Further rain spreading northeast after dusk. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Very wet, with some persistent and heavy rain, especially across southern Pennines Tuesday, but spreading to all parts Wednesday. Colder Thursday, with coastal gales and hill snow possible.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.